

PURDUE UNIVERSITY

One Hundredth Commencement

June 1, 1952

HALL OF MUSIC
LAFAYETTE, INDIANA

To the Class of 1952:

This is a memorable day for you, and it is equally so for Purdue University, since this is our one hundredth Commencement day. Such a milestone invites reflection. Would the graduates of Purdue's first Commencement exercises, or those of the fiftieth, feel at home here today? Would you, in turn, feel at ease if you could somehow be moved backward through time and become a member of one of those early graduating classes?

You would doubtless find the Commencement exercises themselves to be quite similar to those of today, but would you be the same? There would be fewer of you—far fewer, and you might feel more satisfied with your own competence, more confident of your future in a society and a world of stability and relative certainty—or so it seems to us now.

It only seems so. In those days of the walrus mustache and high button shoes, the graduating student felt the usual anxiety about his future—a job, a home, a successful career. Prices were rising, and there were recurrent waves of unemployment. The country was alarmed by strange epidemics. Rival political parties blamed each other for all the ills of the times. Passions were inflamed, and families were disrupted by such issues as Free Silver, the teaching of evolution, the proposal to establish an income tax, and the prohibition amendment. And every June, college seniors attended Commencement and were told that they were the hope of the future.

No cynicism is intended here, nor disillusionment. Our hope is indeed in the young, and without them there would be no future. The graduates of yesterday, and those before them, gave their best that we might sit here today and look toward the future. Our first duty is to justify the work and the hope and the faith of our fathers.

Whether we think of this day as something new and unique or as something a hundred times old, it matters not, for the spirit is the same, and it is the spirit of youth. It was so even in medieval times, when the young Baccalaureus in his cap and gown was formally and publicly pronounced to have attained an adequate "degree" of learning to qualify him for independent activity and eventual leadership. The ceremony was therefore the beginning of his career—his Commencement.

The faculty and officers of Purdue University congratulate you upon your degree and your Commencement. We are here to honor you today. The pomp and pageantry of these Commencement exercises are the symbol of our pride and faith in you—faith that you will be able to solve some of the problems which still baffle us. From ninety-nine Commencement exercises, Purdue graduates have gone forth and brought credit upon themselves and their alma mater. We have complete confidence in you—the Century Class of Purdue University.

FREDERICK L. HOVDE,
President

As an expression of his regard for his alma mater, Mr. Bruce Rogers, Class of 1890, designed the University's diploma in 1932 so that Purdue graduates would have a distinctive symbol of their attainment. Mr. Rogers is the foremost book designer of the twentieth century. He is recognized for such achievements as the two lectern Bibles: the earlier one designed at the Oxford University Press in 1935, and the other completed in 1949. Mr. Rogers' artistry in both the type face and form for many fine limited editions has influenced design in the average trade editions. Purdue University is proud to present this diploma to its graduates.

A reception for the graduates, their relatives, and friends, will be held in the lower lobby of the Hall of Music immediately following each division of the exercises.

The University requests that members of the audience refrain from taking pictures in the Hall of Music. One or two pictures will be taken by the University photographer for use in the official University records.

In deference to other guests and to the radio audience, persons with small children are asked to take them out of the auditorium if they should start to disturb.

"With Distinction"

The outstanding scholastic achievement of selected baccalaureate candidates is recognized by awarding the degree "with distinction" and "with highest distinction." The selection is based on the accumulative index for the candidate's entire program of study which must comprise a minimum of seventy hours completed at Purdue University. Ten per cent of the candidates for each degree who have the highest indexes, and in no case less than a 5.00, receive their degrees "with distinction." Of those candidates who thus qualify, the three tenths having the highest indexes receive their degrees "with highest distinction," irrespective of the degree. The appropriate recognition is recorded on the individual's diploma as a permanent testimonial of his achievement.

THE HISTORY OF CAPS AND GOWNS

Academic costume of today has a history of nearly eight centuries. In medieval Europe, all townsmen—men and women—wore long flowing robes or gowns. The materials and colors varied greatly, according to the wealth and rank of the individual, and were governed by royal decree. Gradually there developed distinctive gowns for the various professions, trades, and guilds. They survive today in the gowns of religious orders and the judiciary, and in academic costume. More colorful survivals are found in Great Britain, especially in great ceremonies of state.

Students in the medieval universities of Paris, Bologna, Oxford, and Cambridge organized themselves into guilds, just as did other groups. Gradually their costume became distinctive for Bachelors (apprentices) of Arts, Masters (teachers), and Doctors (teachers, again, but who had completed post-graduate studies.) The distinction appeared mostly in the hood. The hood derives from the cloak, which in medieval times everybody wore over the gown, as we wear an overcoat. Attached to the cloak, at the back of the neck, was a kind of cowl or hood which hung down, or could be pulled over the head for warmth. After a time, this cowl or hood became a separate article, worn over the head and hanging far down the wearer's back. When caps and hats came into fashion in the fifteenth century, the hoods became merely ornamental, draped over the shoulders and down the back.

The academic cap was a later development. It was first conferred as a symbol of the M.A. degree. Some caps were stiff, some soft, some square, some round, with a tuft in the center. The tassel of today is an elaboration of the tuft. Round caps are still used at some institutions. The "mortar board" style comes to us from Oxford.

In Europe there is still great variation in the colors and shape of the three articles of academic costume, but in our country usage has long been standardized by the Inter-collegiate Code. Taking the Oxford costume as a starting-point, an American system has been worked out. The Bachelor's gown has long, pointed sleeves; the Master's gown has closed sleeves with a slit for the arm; the Doctor's gown has round, open sleeves with three bars of velvet on each, and velvet facing. Like the velvet, the gold tassel on the cap is reserved to Doctors and to Presidents.

Most distinctive are the hoods, one for each of the three degrees. The Bachelor's hood is frequently not used in this country. All hoods are made of the same material as the gown and are lined with silk in the official colors of the institution. Thus, the Purdue hood is lined in black with an old gold chevron. The trim is of velvet, three inches wide for the Master; five inches for the Doctor. This trim is frequently colored; white for a degree in Arts, gold yellow for Science, blue for Philosophy, etc.

The gowns of old gold color are distinctive to Purdue. They are furnished by the University to those faculty members who have been chosen as Marshals, and are worn only at Commencement activities. Thus Purdue contributes one more chapter to the long history of academic costume.
